Internally-Illuminated LED Signs

Temple Edge-Lit Passes the 1,000 Sign Mark

December 1, 2009

Temple Edge-Lit, manufacturer of the R409A Temple Edge-Lit Internally-Illuminated LED Sign, recently celebrated the production of its 1,000th sign on November 5th, 2009. Temple, Inc. initially purchased the R409A Edge-Lit LED Sign business from Carmanah Technologies in February 2009, along with the equipment and materials necessary to manufacture the signs at the Temple Edge-Lit headquarters located in Decatur, Alabama.

Carmanah Technologies was instrumental to the success of the R409A Edge-Lit acquisition, sending a senior production employee, a facility coordinator, and the original Edge-Lit design engineer from British Columbia to oversee a seamless transition. Carmanah technicians arranged production equipment and trained the Temple Edge-Lit staff, taking great care to ensure the new production facility met the standards set forth when the product was initially designed.

The Temple Edge-Lit production staff began manufacturing the R409A in late April 2009. Forrest Temple, the Temple Edge-Lit Production Manager, is now preparing to build upon the success of the R409A and is excited about the opportunities. Temple states, "Several small design changes have yielded some great improvements in the production, aesthetics, and performance of a sign that was already first in its class. We plan to integrate emerging technologies into the R409A in the coming months, and look forward to building upon the very positive experience of this past year."
